There are many different types of charts and graphs that can be used to display data. The most common types are bar charts, line charts, and pie charts. Each type has its own strengths and weaknesses, and the choice of which to use depends on the data being displayed and the audience. For example, bar charts are good for comparing different categories, while line charts are good for showing trends over time. Pie charts are best for showing the relative proportions of different parts of a whole.
